

PHYSICIANS OPPOSED TO THEORY OF EUTHANASIA

They Declare It Impossible of Application and that a Doctor's Duty Is to Preserve Life.

Medical men continued talking to-day about the Rev. Dr. Merle C. Croix, pastor of the Lenox Avenue Presbyterian Church, who made such a sensational advocacy at the New York State Medical Association banquet of the theory of euthanasia—putting incurables out of the way. Not one member of the profession who has been asked for an opinion on the subject agrees with the Harlan minister.

"The subject is one that must be viewed from two points," said Dr. Kingsman B. Page, "yet both lead to one end—the theory is impossible of application. The power of putting any one to death is too great to put in the hands of any man. Physicians have the moral right to act in cases where a patient is suffering acute pain, such as scalding or the effects of a crushing, to relieve the pain, even if the relief that they afford should promote euthanasia or cause the sufferer to pass away sooner and easier than he would have otherwise.

"They have not the legal power, nor will they ever have so long as civilization remains where it is. In chronic cases of illness a physician dare not act. He has no moral nor any other right to do that which might hurry death. No one can be said to be incurable until the breath has left his body.

"It is too early in the day," said Dr. John H. Forman, "to talk about euthanasia. Who is going to say that any man is incurable? No human being has any right to take upon himself the right to determine when the existence of a fellow-man shall end, least of all a physician, whose sworn duty is to preserve life as long as his skill holds out."

"Euthanasia is too serious a subject to discuss off hand, as some people do," said Dr. Mahon, superintendent of Bellevue Hospital. "I, for one, would not care to be committed to any statement until after I had given it long and careful consideration. However, I may say that the use of those things for the relief of pain which science has given us aids in the majority of instances in producing the result that the theory of euthanasia has for its purpose. The class of cases in which this occurs are not what can be termed incurable, but where life cannot possibly last—where there is no hope—where the patient is in the very throes of death."

"If physicians wish to do their duty they cannot for a moment consider the possibility of the theory of euthanasia," said Dr. S. G. Frank. "It is our duty to save life by all the means known to our skill, not to destroy it, and nothing is incurable so long as life lasts. What the future may bring forth no man can tell, and it is just as well that we should not try to find out, but be content with our present estimate of things."
